PUBLIC WORKS

POMONA QUIET ZONE SUSPENSION

There are two railroad corridors that currently travel through the City of Pomona. The railroad corridor through Downtown Pomona has been established as a Quiet Zone. It should be noted that even in a Quiet Zone, train engineers are obligated to blow the horn when they foresee a dangerous situation (e.g. motorists or pedestrians attempting to cross) or in an emergency situation. The northerly railroad corridor, between Arrow Hwy. and Bonita Ave., is currently not a Quiet Zone.

During a recent inspection in May 2024, the Federal Railroad Administration (FRA) identified a list of corrective items (signage, striping, median islands) to be addressed as part of the requirements to preserve the Quiet Zone designation. Until these corrective items can be addressed and mitigated, the FRA has suspended the Quiet Zone designation. As a result, you may hear the blowing of the train horns more frequently.

The City and the Union Pacific Railroad (UPR) are working jointly to address these items. Staff is working on a remedial action plan for FRA approval. Once the action plan is approved, the City will need to secure appropriate permits from UPR prior to the start of any work. The Quiet Zone will be suspended until all corrective items are addressed.
